U. S. TREASURY FACING $25,000,000 DEFICIT IN 1914 SAYS MR. TAFT

President in Probably Last Message to Congress Describes His Plans for Establishing Budget System

ECONOMY IS URGED

Chief Executive Advocates Centralized Supervision of Finances and Payment of Public Debt in 20 Years

WASHINGTON-In what probably is his last message to Congress, President Taft details today his plans for a "budget' system of grouping governmental estimates and arranging for expenditures. He declares the treasury faces a $25,-

000,000 deficit next year. Among the recommendations in his message are: Retirement of greenbacks, repeal of the sinking fund law, centralized super-vision of receipts and expenditures, reorganization of the civil service and abolition of unimportant positions, consolidation of all government mints and assay offices into one big central plant, elimination of waste in government printing and doing away with assistant postmasters by requiring postmasters to

DEMAND FOR WOMAN SUFFRAGE MADE AT LONDON GATHERING

LONDON-The Federated Council of Women's Suffrage Societies held a big demonstration in Queen's hall to urge the government to fulfil its pledge and to assert its demand for an immediate government measure on the subject of woman's franchise. This was the first meeting of the United Societies since the speaker's ruling, and the withdrawal of the franchise bill. The attendance was enormous, over 20 societies from all over England sending delegates and banners to represent them.

One of the chief features of the demonstration was a letter, which was read by Miss Farquharson, from George Bernard Shaw. He would not meddle with the meeting, it had better be left to the women because, he declared, "the line that will be taken is a denunciation of the government for a breach of faith, probably preconcerted. That is not my line. I should concentrate the attack on the speaker, accusing him not only of gross partiality, but of concealing his coup de main from the government until the last moment so as to discredit them and defeat the women at one stroke. I should say that Mr. Asquith would be more than human if he were sorry to see the women defeated, as he never concealed his personal opposition to the suffrage movement.

"I should prove the case against the speaker, not by denying the strict accuracy of his ruling, but by citing cases in which much more revolutionary changes, and wholly unexpected ones have been introduced in bills without any remonstrance from him. I should urge that a speaker who is lax in respect of bills to which he is indifferent, and. strict in respect of bills of which he disapproves, is much more unfit for his chair than one whose practise is invariable. But your people will hit out all over the place at everybody except the speaker, fore a wondering throng of native popu- controllers and brakes. The new men who will escape whilst you are pummelling Asquith and Lloyd-George, and the cabinet generally." Miss Broadhurst, the chairman, said that that great meeting had been organized in three days and it alone constituted a proof of the political conditions that had been brought about by the ruth-less breaking of a government pledge.

LATIN-AMERICAN NEWS Frederico Pezet Compliments

The Christian Science Monitor Upon the Accuracy of Its Reports

WASHINGTON-Among officials who have commended the care used by The Christian Science Monitor in handling its Latin-American news and the accuracy of its reports in Frederico Pezet, Peruvjan minister to the United States.

"I am absolutely satisfied that the rewhich appear in the columns of The Christian Science Monitor are accurate and reliable," said Mr. Pezet, "and this is peculiarly impressive at a time when it is felt in diplomatic circles here that caution must be exercised in placing credence in the average newspaper reports from the countries where there is unrest or revolution.

"Recent developments have instituted a much greater demand for news from Central and South America than ever has been known before, and it is found that the diffusion of knowledge of Latin-American events is already finding a proper channel through the columns of the Monitor.

"For this reason I feel that I could not do without a perusal of its Latin-American pages and I often have told my friends that the paper is one that should be on the desk of every diplomat and government official in Washington.

"It is carrying at the present time more news of the world at large than any other paper in this country, and I am confident that its Edropean columns are

"Another valuable feature of the paper which probably is not accorded its true the plans. The boys have provided two significance outside of diplomatic circles parlor cars for the Wilson party on their is that its headlines really give the substance of the various articles. The importance of this is grasped when it is known that many of the sensational 'scareheads' used by certain papers to announce news affecting Latin-American countries are cabled to those countries without the articles themselves.

"In this way grossly false impressions are created and misapprehensions aroused without excuse. Government officials and diplomats understand this situation of affairs and are unaffected by the stories and rumors thus put afoot, but the pub-lic at large are ignorant of these conditions and national sentiment errs as a result. The responsibility of the press in these matters is a heavy one and the Monitor is to be highly commended for the admirable way in which it is icuitting itself of its duty."

THIS pattern worked on very sheer linen makes a beautiful handkerchief. The scallops are padded and closely buttonholed. The flowers and leaves are worked solid, with the stems in the outline stitch. The dots may be worked solid or as eyelets. Mercerized cotton No. 35 should be used.

Directions for transferring-Lay a piece of impression paper, face down, upon the material. Place the newspaper pattern in position over this, and with a hard, sharp pencil, firmly trace each line.

If the material is sheer, this may be laid over the pattern, and the design drawn direct on the goods, as it will show through. When handled in this way, impression paper, of course, will not be required.

SMART GOWN IN SIMPLE STYLE

Lines are graceful and neck is worn open

THE gown that is at once simple and smart is the one for which every woman is seeking. This one can be made without much effort. The lines are graceful and becoming and the sleeves can be made to the wrists or to the elbows as liked.

As shown here, there are frills of lace arranged under the box plait at the front of the blouse that give a dainty touch. The neck is worn open, but there is a chemisette that can be adjusted when occasion requires, and, if a plainer dress is wanted, the frills can be omitted.

The material here illustrated is one of the new ones in ribbed weave combining silk and cotton, and every variation of the poplin weave is popular, but the model can be utilized for various fabrics. Crepes are exceedingly fashionable and crepe, wool crepe and cotton crepe all make up prettily in this way. Ratine is extensively used, and new ratine is delightfully light in weight and charming. The cotton ratines of the season ovely, for this material has been developed into something very charming and quite unlike what at first appeared.

We are using silks for simple gowns also, and this model would be a good one for any of the simple sorts, foulard, crepe de chine or the charmeuse that is such a pronounced favorite.

In this case, trimming has been arranged over the box plait of the blouse and over the plait at the front of the skirt for a portion of its length, but this treatment is not necessary.

The gown consists of a three-pie skirt and a plain bloase. Each is finished with a narrow box plait at the front and the two are joined at the waist line. For the medium size, the gown will require 8 yards of material 27, 5 yards 36 or 41/2 yards 44 inches wide with 1/2 yard 21 for the collar, 3/4 yard 21 for the trimming illustrated, I yard of lace for the frills. 1/2 yard 18 for the chemi

ODDS and ends of bright ginghams left over from the making of the little dresses, make very pretty cushion covers. Any shapes may be used in the piecing, and a pretty pattern for a quilt block will do nicely. Harmonizing colors should be chosen, and if the colors are all dark, or light, they may be "livened" by doing fancy stitches with fadeless crochet cottons, or the cottons used for such work, over the seams. The pieces may be made into small blocks or strips and joined together with beading, either white or colored, or dress braid, and the top and bottom may be "tufted" after a lining of cotton is laid between.-Commoner.

LUNCHEON BREAD

There is no better way of using sour milk than in making a spoon bread after this recipe, says the Newark News. Break an egg into two cupfuls of sour milk and then sift into the mixture generous cupful of white cornmeal, half a teaspoonful of salt and half a teaspoonful of soda; beat this mixture thoroughly. Grease a pan or dish holding about a quart and put it on the stove till it is very hot; then pour the batter into it and bake till a delicate brown in a hot oven. This will take about a quarter of an hour. Serve im-

M. Briand said in effect that the government intends to support the present bill in the Senate in its essential principles, namely, vote by ballot and equitable representation of minorities based on the system of a quotient. He went on to say that if once this essential principle 70 years, was erected in 1838-9. #### Issue is Obviously Clear

It is now definitely known that the present government intends to pursue strictly the policy of the late cabinet.

The interesting feature of this interview lies in the fact that the committee in general are opposed to the present bill. The statement of the premier was of such a character as to make the issue obviously clear and simple, his manner Thomas," has been adopted by the orately desired the committee to express dore Thomas Orchestra." In following the precedent of his able TRANSPORTATION predecessors in explaining the views of the government in so frank and unreserved a manner, so far as the essential principle is concerned, M. Briand has cut the ground from under the feet of those whose politics hang upon the uncertainties and complexities surrounding the various issues. This has been hitherto possible simply through the over-cautious attitude of ministers, who have rather relied upon a policy of arrangement with their opponents to secure the acceptance of a measure than upon the absolute merits of the measure itself.

Melyn, who was a man of upright character, of education and property, was born at Antwerp about 1602, and it brings him vividly before the eye to remember, as Mr. Inness puts it, that "in Melyn's day, Antwerp had attained Governor of New Netherland who instithe height of its great artistic fame, and gated and sanctioned wrong. he may have often seen or talked with Rubens, Van Dyke and Teniers."

Melvn was a member of the Twelve advice in Indian matters. This council advocated moderation while Kieft was bent on a policy of extermination, and it further incurred his disfavor by petitioning, in the name of the commonalty, for much needed reforms in the government. It was therefore arbitrarily dissolved. But the Indian troubles having gone on to a crucial point another council called the Eight Men. was convened. Melyn was also one of Jochem Pietersen Kuyter.

Another manuscript turns out to be the record of a deed by which Cornelis Melyn transfers to his son-in-law, Jacob Loper, a "house and two lots on the East river of Manhattan"; and another (Aug. 14, 1649) is Jacob Loper's power of attorney conferred upon Cornelis Melyn to "receive money due him by the W. I. Company at Amsterdam."

In 1657 Cornelis Melyn and his son Samuel removed to New Haven, taking the oath of allegiance to that colony. Later the patroon sold his lands and patroon rights to the West India Company and seems thereafter to have made New Haven his permanent home, though some of his family were always in New Amsterdam. and every three weeks thereafter

The "Imperator" will make an extended trial cruise, subjecting every department of this great ship to a thorough and most searching test before her entry into the transatlantic service.

She will start on her maiden voyage from Hamburg via Southampton and Cherbourg to New York on May

This great vessel is of a new type, and will be followed two sister ships in 1914 and 1915, which will represent the last word in modern marine construction, and PARTICULARLY IN POINT OF SAFETY.

Her builders, The Vulcan Ship Building Works of Hamburg, have had instructions to go far beyond the very exacting requirements of the German Government for safety in construction and equipment of safety appliances so as to produce safeguards of the very highest order.

As shown on the accompanying diagram, the "Imperator" has 16 water-tight bulkheads, each extending across the ship and to a point well above the water-line. Bulkhead No. 5, at a point just under the bridge, extends to the main deck, which is on a line drawn from the uppermost point of the bow to the stern.

Between Bulkheads 10 and 11 there is a longitudinal bulkhead extending the full length of the engine room, dividing same into two water-tight compartments. Aft of Bulkhead No. 11 the compartments are small, making it unnecessary to provide an inner skin in this section.

The water-tight compartments formed by these bulkheads are further subdivided by the double skin A and the double sides B, thus dividing the hull into 35 distinct watertight compartments, the closing of all of which is under direct control from the bridge.

The "IMPERATOR" will carry a Commodore and three Staff Captains, one of whom will always be on the bridge. At the wireless key there will always be two operators day and night.

The passenger-carrying capacity of the "IMPERATOR" will not be much larger than the great ocean liners of about one-half her tonnage, but the great dimensions of the ship were considered necessary to provide for greater safety and stability, and at the same time to offer the traveling public accommodations, as regards size and convenience, hitherto unknown on Atlantic liners.

In addition to the well-known features of modern ocean steamers, there will be a great Ritz-Carlton a la carte Restaurant and Winter Garden, similar in arrangement and size to these features in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in New York, a Grill Room, Private Dining Rooms, Pompeiian Bath and Swimming Pool, and a Gymnasium.

The stateroom equipment includes no less than 150 private bath or shower and toilet rooms provided in connection with suites, chambres de luxe and ordinary double as well as single staterooms.

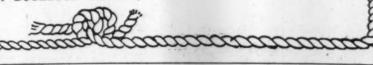

The speed of the "IMPERATOR" has been fixed so that the passengers will arrive in London and Paris on the sixth day, and in HAMBURG (Berlin) on the seventh day after leaving NEW YORK, and that the port landings take place at a convenient hour during the day so as to avoid the inconvenience of night travel to LONDON and PARIS and the attendant annoyance of arriving at these destination points in the early morning hours.

A change has also been made recently in the route of the "KAISERIN AUGUSTE VICTORIA" and "AMERI-KA" by landing at CHERBOURG first and then at SOUTH-AMPTON on the way to Hamburg, to afford their passengers these same advantages.

The booking records for the "IMPERATOR," "KAI-SERIN AUGUSTE VICTORIA," "AMERIKA" and other vessels of our service for the summer season are now open, and an early reservation for your summer trip is requested if you wish to have the choice of rooms as to location and

Attractive Features

Leavenworth has many attractive features as a residential city. Its streets are paved, bordered for the most part with well-kept lawns and lined with stately trees. It has numerous fine public and business buildings, and the usual quota of churches, schools, parks and public institutions. An addition has been made to the high school in the last year, and the school system is of high excellence.

To the north stretches the military post, which is a city in itself with its handsome homes, fine buildings and wellkept grounds. The Army Staff College of the post on the towering bluffs overlooking the river adds much to its pi turesqueness. For those of us who play golf profoundly hope that they will find in as a game and love it as such it seems to me that our point of view is in danger where to help them on their way." of becoming far too complicated, and I cannot help thinking that the more simply people regard the game the better, at any rate until they can play down to two or three handicap with tolerable Joaquin Miller, the "Poet of the Sierras."

The fact is that at present we theorize too soon-we try and find out the cube root of things before we can add up property "in excess of $10,000." properly. The simple, natural process of sweeping the ball off the tee becomes a bewildering series of turning wrists, bending knees, pivoting body, etc., etc. each minute action to be performed in due order and the failure to perform any one threatening us with dire results. This is too much for ordinary persons. The true joy of the game consists of hitting the ball successfully and winning your match. The length, trajectory, and "run" of the shot are, generally speaking, governed largely by the particular club used; it remains, therefore, chiefly for us to perfect ourselves as regards direction-or, in other words, ep straight. The man who keeps It is a belief that the joy of singing is only for a gifted few, but it has been my privilege to bring out voices where there seemed to be little promise of voice, and to correct voices that were believed to be hopelessly impaired.

If desired I will study the voice in public performance and work with a singer to overcome difficulties, correct faults and develop pure tone. Tel.Ox.1536 straight wins his matches; he may not be brilliant, he may not even seem to be particularly good, but all the same the victory is his as we walk off the last

I recommend every beginner to place himself for a time in the hands of a professional who will impart some idea f the swing and use of the different clubs. In fact, right through a golfer's career periodical games with the club are eminently desirable—they open one's eyes as to the possibilities of the game and at the same time offer an opportunity of checking any out-

Language-Phone Method Rosenthal's Practical Linguistry

With this method you buy a native profes-or outright. You own him. You hear his correctly and distinctly. He speaks as you choose, slowly or quickly. When you choose, night or day. For a few minutes or for hours at a time.

nours at a time.

Any one can learn a foreign language whears it spoken often enough. And by the method you can hear it as often as you lik. You simply practise during spare momen or at convenient times, and in a short tin you speak, read and understand a new larguage.

IDEAL FOR HOME STUDY!

It is not expensive—you or any member of the family may use it. The lessons are a recreation, never a task The lessons are a recreation, never a task, ceause they deal with interesting and praccal subjects from the start.

You hear the language spoken and speak it burself from the very first lesson.

You can have the lessons at such fine as no are in the mood to listen, because the actor is always at your service. These are only a few of the many advantages that have attracted thousands of men and women—in all professions—in business—in society—to this method, as the most perfect, natural and successful way of acquiring a foreign language.

rect, natural and successful way of acquiring a foreign language.

This method is highly endorsed and recommended by leading authorities of the following universities and colleges:

SOUTHERN RAILWAY CROP SURPLUS EARNINGS SHOWING

Year's Preferred Stock Dividend in Six Months—Conservative Aim

Earnings of the Southern Railway into actual consumption. Company are showing satisfactory imrevenues had recorded an increase over or about 11 per cent, while the improvement in operating income was $107,000 or 6 per cent.

For the six months ended Dec. 31, last. he increase in gross was approximately $3,000,000 or 8.97 per cent, while operating income rose a little over $500,000 or 51/4 per cent.

For the six months Southern railway more than earned a full year's preferred stock dividend. On the basis of figures for the half year, it earned a little over 2% per cent on its common stock or at the annual rate of over 51/2 per cent. The first six months, however, are always better than the last six months which renders it impossible to use the returns for the entire 12 months. Last year the road earned a little over 3 per cent on its common stock, as compared with a like amount in the year previous and about 21/4 per cent in 1910.

The better exhibit of earnings now being shown is the result of a most con servative policy on the part of Presi dent Finley and his associates during the past six years. From the time the preferred stock dividend was passed up to April 24, 1911, when it was resumed of double-tracking, realignment, etc., was done, and at the present time the ever before. #### Some Hints for Music Teachers

Josef Hofmann when asked about the old-fashioned rule that people should consider a staccato mark as shortening the note by one half, says in the Ladies Home Journal that this is by no means correct. He explains the stand he takes by the following passage:

"As musical markings never mean anything absolute, so a staccato mark only indicates a tendency toward a more its relation to the particular place where the marking occurs. For example, the staccato in a sprightly scherzo must where it would have to be heavier and more ominous in effect. In art, as in nature, everything is relative."

In reply to some other questions h says: "The development of our faculties should always come from within and not from without." And this:

rial through which a teacher conveys his make of it. To me, personally, Czerny ThE waters of the falls of Lodore, Southey's well-known description of and Clementi seem a trifle dry; but your teacher may find it necessary to resort to this class of studies, because your musical talent is perhaps so strong as to carry you away from the purely mechanical purpose if he gave you studies of finer musical qualities. Still I think that it is fairly safe to try the 48 Etudes by J. B. Cramer, which combine musical merit with their technical aims. The choice of new studies depends entirely upon the way the older ones are mastered."

School Children and Home Work

There is a good deal of comment in current educational discussions on the subject of home lessons for school children. Teachers find it necessary in order to accomplish the amount of work required, to set lessons for home study. Many parents, on the other hand, feel that the long hours spent in the school rooms should cover all the book work that children need, leaving their out of school hours for play or for learning simple and practical helpfulness in the home or for such extra study-music, for example—as the parents choose. It would seem as if one difficulty in the schools is that the classes are too large. One teacher cannot sufficiently oversee the daily study of 50 or even 30 children. This makes it necessary to neglect individuals to a large extent, and the helpful association with the teacher's thought and active class room work is not possible for every child every day. If classes were smaller the individuals could be examined and their difficulties cleared away by the direct questioning of the teacher. It is the time spent in recitations that is more or less wasted, since it is hard to make young children attend closely to recitation. With smaller classes the recitation periods could be made more profitable, the study hours more frequent and perhaps the whole work could be done in school, or at any rate a larger share of it than is at present possible.

In most high schools of course the shorter hours are planned with the direct purpose of leaving the pupils time for home and library work. But even in the igh schools too much night work would not seem so useful as a better economy of time in school so that the most is made of every hour,

Highway Signs in York State

The state of New York has a very stringent law making it a misdemeanor to place an advertisement of any sort upon any stone, tree, fence, building or other structure without first obtaining the written consent of the owner; or placing such a sign upon a stone, tree, fence, milestone, guidepost, danger sig-nal, billboard, building or other nal, billboard, structure within the limits of the public highway. The law permits any one to tear down or deface such advertisements, and Leslies says that under the National Highway Protective Society a general lean-up was made last summer. Autoists lent a hand and the interest of the children of the public schools was en-

Possibilities of a Republican Convention

REUNITING the Republican party, a task in which the leaders who have remained under the old banner are showing signs of interest, meets one rather serious difficulty. It is that the half that has broken away declines to take the slightest interest in the project. It shows the disposition of a colt that has gone over the farmyard fence and persists in nibbling the grass in spite of the vigorous shaking of delectable oats as near to its nose as the farmer dares to go. There is respect for the heels that have on recent occasion shown what they are like in action. The usual conclusion is that the creature better be left to work off its joy in freedom and the gate kept open for return when the mood changes. The height of wisdom for the help that have stayed on the farm, we should think, would be to keep the gate open and to make the return as attractive as possible.

It is proposed to hold a Republican national convention the present year. The old leaders of the party must be credited with real courage that they even think of a national convention so soon after that one of last June. They are not, presumably, dull to the fact that not all the Progressives went out with Mr. Roosevelt. Senator La Follette would probably attend. So would Senator Cummins and Senator Kenyon and Senator Borah and Governor Hadley. It is not at all certain that they would not be the masters of the new gathering; indeed, their case would be so good, they could make such pointed observations on the disaster that befell the old leaders, that they might have the logic as well as the numbers with them.

One task, however, cannot be avoided, and apparently it cannot be performed by any less an instrument than a national convention. It is the change of the basis of representation, to do away with the preponderance of the South. The party ought, as everybody now discovers, long ago to have changed the membership of the national convention to the basis of the party vote and away from the equality of all congressional districts without regard to the party's strength in them. It has suffered sadly under the continuance of this old rule, even though the rule prevented the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt. A national convention that would remove that difficulty and hasten home would arouse little fear. What it would feel bound to do, namely, to discuss the standing of the party, consider who should lead it, and undertake a new platform, involves peril and perhaps further division.

Wherever the Progressives gather, they of the new party, there is loud acclaim of no compromise. In Boston and other cities the recent holiday was made the time for great meetings of the new enthusiasts. In none of them was there the least sign of concession or of a wish to come back to old associations. The "Old Oaken Bucket" is not in the Progressive song book. Flushed with the achievement of the first year, namely, the wreck of the old party, there is no thought of helping to put it in repair.

Difficult as the problem of the Republican party appears to be, lacking as are all avenues in promise of leading to the old-time power, the least likely of all prospects is that it will cease to exist. If a national convention were to show it capable of taking on new leadership and giving to the actual progressives who are still very numerous in its ranks the full measure of power, it would be justified. There would be the other possibility, that it would show the party uninstructed and unimproved by its recent chastisement; and, showing that, it would be only writing the last chapter of its story. But might it not as well find out what its condition is?

Communities Should Keep Out of Debt

A PHASE of contemporary experience that is discernible on more than one continent and among all peoples and under many forms of government is the mounting indebtedness of organized communities. The present generation is loading not only itself but subsequent ones with burdens that may not be endured or borne as jauntily as they have often been imposed. Statesmen, prudent and courageous enough to resist the trend, are few and far between. The more democratic the form of government, the more intelligent the voting constituency, the less disposed to economy often are those who know precisely the meaning of indebtedness. Where there is the maximum of liberty for choice of efficient and trained administrators to posts having to do with taxation and expenditure, and where in theory there should be the highest valuation on expert advice, there is often a minimum of such willingness.

Precisely where the United States stands at the present time in connection with the world-habit of borrowing and asking credit to meet administrative costs and to finance social enterprises, has recently been defined by one of the leading engineering experts of the country. He points out that a new and vitally important field of conservation awaits citizens who will resist the trend toward extravagance. On ethical as well as economic grounds such a course is necessary, extravagance leading as surely to communal as to personal downfall. Living costs even now are registering the effect of the spendthrift habit of the past generation.

What Mr. Baker of the Engineering News most deprecates is the tendency apparent "to regard the increase of the public debt as a permanent obligation, instead of one to be paid off and extinguished in annual instalments as large as the public can afford." For the occasional debtor there is hope, if he uses capital acquired by loans to put him beyond need of further borrowings; but the chronic debtor, who settles down deliberately to the process of borrowing and never expects to escape from the thraldom, soon loses his status in reputable society. Today's generation need not pay wholly for that which tomorrow's also will use; but neither has today the right to cast upon the future obligations that be grievous to bear or will be repudiated. One of the most searching portions of Mr. Baker's discussion of this problem is that in which he supports the assertion that "the public will not indefinitely endure the burden of interest-paying." Systematic reduction and final extinction of community debts are as necessary for the social good as keeping outgo within income is essential for personal and family

"Town and gown" have seldom come together in as fine a way for the adornment of an academic community that at the same time has large business interests, as in the cooperation of Harvard University and the association of business men with shops on Harvard square in Cambridge. Experts in city planning and landscape architecture, and experienced business men, have pursued the study of the Harvard square problem with broad vision and with distant as well as near goals in view. Cambridge as a unit in a great metropolitan scheme of urban betterment has been kept in view, as well as the lesser matters of adornment of the square, the university yard, and the region lying between the yard and the river.

In the first place, it is foreseen that, with the new subway built, the residential region adjacent to the university and the square is to have swift development, chiefly in apartment houses. Their residents will provide new customers for the shops of the square. Sensibly it is urged that the city adopt such building restrictions as will conserve the desired sort of building development. There is recognition of the need of a hotel and a theater. University necessities call for each. In the case of the latter, if plans that are independent in origin but allied in purpose do not miscarry, Harvard may be able to give to its renowned department of dramatic literature and its training school of playwrights a laboratory equal to their needs.

The most disputable because most revolutionary part of the report just rendered to Mayor Barry undoubtedly has to do with widening of avenues and streets, establishment of new building lines, and such plans for disposition of the property south of Massachusetts avenue and east of Boylston street as seem necessary, if both town and university are to profit most effectively by coming expenditures in that region. Future surface traffic, radiating from or centering in Harvard square, coming in due time from Brighton and Brookline as now from Watertown, Belmont and Arlington, and passing on down the main artery of Massachusetts avenue to Central square and beyond, will need wider approaches than now exist; and in Harvard square itself space can be gained, the commissioners think, by arcading the stores on the south side of Massachusetts avenue.

For many generations Harvard University failed to give any, much less adequate, consideration to the esthetics of her own institutional development. Only recently has begun a new era, with a willingness to assume local civic duties. Whatever may be the immediate response of citizens to this elaborate report in which university experts and city merchants join, the Rubicon of indifference has been crossed, and a venture made that no doubt will ultimate in excellent results. Were the university, aided by some of its wealthy alumni, to lead off effectively with its share of the proposed reconstruction, the city and property owners would be likely to follow quickly.

THE Canadian new railroad mileage for 1913 is at present roughly estimated at 2700 miles, as against 1075 miles in 1912. Nevertheless, it is not pretended that construction is keeping up with the country's needs, or, at least, with the country's opportunities. From all appearances immigration will flow stronger this year than at any former time, and Canada's great task for the present is to provide for the largest possible percentage of the new comers in the agricultural regions. This can be done best by opening to settlement all the new territory available, and by taking good care of the transportation needs of those already on the soil.

THOSE who sincerely wish to confer honor on Colonel Goethals will hardly do it by giving his name to parts of the Panama canal that have now taken on historic association. "Culebra cut" is much better than "Goethals gateway" would be, and the colonel will probably be among the first to say so.

Coars for men and women in the near future are to be very much alike, according to the National Association of Merchant Tailors. If so, it will be interesting to observe how the women will vie with each other in getting car fare out of the little fob above the right hand side pocket.

THE treasury department, it is said, has already received applications for 2,000,000 of the new nickels. They will be out on Saturday and may be as scarce, for a while, as were the Lincoln 1-cent pieces. But the nickel is nimble and the new one will soon get around.

JACKSON, FLA., insists that all electric light wires shall be put out of sight, preferably under the sidewalks. It is a fact well understood that where the hiding of wires is insisted upon, means of hiding them are usually found.

It is well enough for prospective callers at the White House under the new regime to know that the chief occupant is an expert shorthand man, and that he takes notes mechanically, whether he appears to or not.

Representation for the Small Town THERE are thousands of small communities in the United States that have been kept out of the public view for years simply because they have not been identified with occurrences calculated to startle or to shock the country. The very fact that they have been quietly and peacefully progressive and prosperous has barred them, under the prevalent conception of the meaning of news, from attention, publicity, representation in the press. There are, to be conservative, hundreds of small communities that have become known to the public only through association with unpleasant incidents wholly foreign to the general tenor of their way. To put it in another light, nearly every state in the American Union contains from dozens to scores of towns and cities that are practically unknown, even by name, to the American public at large.

The Monitor is engaged in the pleasant task of setting this right. It is a task no less agreeable to us than it is informing to our readers. The small town descriptions and illustrations that are appearing regularly in this newspaper do not interest merely the localities immediately concerned; we have reason to know that they have interest for the general reader and that they are making a special appeal to educators. They are enlightening to teachers as well as to children. They show that the tiny specks on the map stand for something more than mere names of places, that they are centers of population, centers of activity, often centers of thought and culture, units that constitute the sum of American nationality.

We are particularly pleased that teachers are taking this series of short, illustrated articles into their class work as a supplement to studies in geography. The tendency toward provincialism, which is strong even in such a big country as the United States, needs to be watched and checked. Especially desirable is it that children shall look out rather than look in. They should have the broad view. They should be taught that there is much to see and to enjoy and to learn beyond their own town and county and state. If they cannot travel, they at least can be instructed, and the small town articles in this newspaper, though designed for the general reader, are well calculated to serve as aids toward giving the children that insight into the broadcast communal life of the nation that they ought to have in order to appreciate their country at its full value.

Mexico is a country of great natural resources, but peace is essential to the proper employment of them.

OF CONTEMPORARY British makers of verse, some, like Kipling and Masefield, know the United States through touch with its life in their comparative youth. Others know the republic only by study of its literature, by contact with its men of affairs or men of letters met in London or on the continent, or by reading of the national history. In turn, a vast majority of American admirers of British poets, past and present, have come Welcoming a Singer of Peace to their admiration through literature, and not through personal intercourse. For even when the voyage across the Atlantic is ventured upon and a tour of the states projected, the British bard usually falls into the hands of "intellectuals" and is kept from meeting the rank and file of the people, either through the exclusive claims upon his time by, fellow authors or because of the stern demands of the manager of the lecture agency who is responsible for his itinerary. A European who judges America by receptions given him by authors' clubs in Atlantic coast cities, or who formulates comparisons of civilizations on data derived while rushing over a continent keeping a lecture schedule, is not likely to return home with data worth publishing even as "impressionistic" literature.

These things are worth remembering in view of the arrival in New York of Alfred Noyes, whose lyric verse and epic of "Drake" have given him an appreciative American constituency. As he comes with a pretty definite purpose to further the cause of anti-militarism and is a herald of "the dawn of peace," he is likely to be so fortunate as to come in touch with publicists, educators and humanitarians as well as with authors. The cause of arbitration has a backing in the United States that enables any European or Asiatic, temporarily enlisted in propaganda work, to come close to some of the ablest citizens of the republic. Nitobe, the Japanese author and educator, has recently had proof of this, as has the Baroness von Suttner.

Of course Mr. Noyes must be prepared to have his new acquaintances challenge, with the lift of an eyebrow if not the word, his admission that by poesy he earns his daily bread. America has verse-writers who do this for yellow journals and press syndicates, but there are few if any of them among authors such as Mr. Noyes will be likely to meet most frequently as hosts. Such a statement by him is as creditable to the British reading public as it is surprising to the American critic. But much depends upon an author's scale of living. Ere Mr. Noyes re-embarks he may expect to be much quizzed about details of this aspect of his life, especially by "geniuses" whose success in getting publishers is in inverse ratio to the rise in cost of living.

Perhaps it is superfluous to remark that at a time when certain lawmakers at Washington are doing their best to create friction between Great Britain and the United States the young psalmist of peace and human fraternity will be especially welcome in America.

THERE appears in one of the latest Rio papers to hand an editorial on the immigration problems in Brazil, in which Argentina is designated as having solved her problems through the establishment of a national school system. "The apparatus of absorption that has worked wonders in the Argentine Republic by nationalizing the sons of immigrants," the article says, "is the school. We do not yet possess that admirable instru-

Aliens and Schools in Brazil ment, which is the only one that in our southern states can save us from the imminent danger of new countries forming within our country." This has reference to the "Impressions from the South," published over a well-known signature, in which the work of the schools maintained by the compact population of alien settlers in the south is viewed as a menace to Brazilian national integrity.

American readers, knowing that the astounding unity of their nation is due primarily to the assimilating and leveling power of the public school system, may well wonder why Brazil is still without it when the Argentine Republic has derived from it consolidating and bracing results. The reason is that the Argentine, like some but not all of the other Spanish-American republics, is essentially a nation, while Brazil is essentially an empire. With the fundamental differences between Spanish and Portuguese settlement and development, it is not surprising that their American colonies should have differed in this, too, that the one split up into many independent entities, logically or otherwise, while the other held together. It is evident that immigration problems viewed from an imperialistic standpoint are vastly different from those of the national kind. With Brazil the question has been largely how to fill up its enormous empty areas, to fill them with the best stock available, to be sure. but above all to fill them. Had other considerations ever prevailed over this ever-present problem of numbers, the reception of the liberated negro slaves into the Brazilian nation as a recognized ethnic element, with all that miscegenation implies, would not have been easily conceivable. But with a precedent of such force it is wholly explicable that Brazil should have welcomed Japanese immigration to the extent of being today a prime factor in the expansionist ambition and policy of Nippon.

It is a problem not of absorbing so much as of welding together different racial elements, that confronts Brazil, and the particular type of national school best adapted for such imperial blending cannot be found outside the country but must be evolved from within. The press that maintains that the future national school of Brazil alone can bind Brazil together, is raising a point that is of profound interest to the Americas and to the world at large.
